Heat Safety. Glendale safety officials encourage residents to be safe and smart during extreme temperature days. With temperatures climbing, Glendale firefighters want you to stay safe. Following these simple tips will help you survive the heat.

- Exercise and do yard work early. Avoid being outside during the hours of 11 a.m. through 6 p.m., when temperatures can reach their highest.
- Water wins. Drink plenty of water before, during and after any outside activity. Staying hydrated is one way to keep your body healthy in extreme heat. Limit soda, caffeine and alcohol during any outside activity.
- Protect your skin. Wear a hat, and apply sunscreen to prevent sunburn.
- Keep kids safe. Never leave a child or pet inside an unattended vehicle. Temperatures may reach 200 degrees or more in just a few minutes and will cause serious injury or death!
